

Internet Policy

The North Of Boston Library Exchange (NOBLE) provides Internet access to member libraries for the use of their staff and patrons. As an interconnected network of networks, the Internet offers an unsurpassed collection of materials from millions of sources across the globe, providing access to information and ideas which often are not otherwise available.

However, users should note the following:

- While much of the information on the Internet is of great value to researchers, there is also material which may be offensive or disturbing to some individuals and may not be appropriate for certain age groups. There may also be material that is illegal. NOBLE does not monitor Internet use. NOBLE, at the request of a library, may filter Internet content. Please note Internet filters are imperfect and neither NOBLE nor the library can assume responsibility for the content found on the Internet, even in a filtered environment. Ultimately, individuals, and the parents or guardians of children, are responsible for the sites accessed through NOBLE's Internet connection.
- The use of Internet access through NOBLE for illegal purposes or to transmit threatening, obscene, or harassing materials is strictly prohibited.
- NOBLE does not provide e-mail accounts to the public.
